Civic Action Plan- Roadmap to 2020
Alfred State- SUNY College of Technology

Executive Summary
Alfred State students, faculty, and staff generate positive impact in the larger community year after year. This positive impact through civic engagement takes place through live work, internships, practicums, co-curricular activities, international study, capstone courses, clinical placements and other types of applied learning. Our learning community excels at applying knowledge and skills to address challenges and solve problems as productive contributors in the workforce and as active citizens.

The Civic Action Plan Committee developed the following Civic Action Plan (CAP) through a collaborative process of discovery and input. The outcome is twenty-four specific actions that help provide a roadmap to enhancing the impact of our teaching, learning, and institutional practices to advance the public good. The plan envisions high impact community engagement as a core element of the co-curricular and/or curricular student experience and an integral consideration in institutional practices.

Background
Faculty Senate defines civic engagement as “action that identifies or addresses an issue of public concern.” This term speaks to using our skills and knowledge to make a positive difference in the larger community. The action referenced might include a class project, co-curricular program, individual volunteerism, philanthropy, or a college initiative or policy - all enabling student learning while generating community benefit.

The Civic Action Plan complements and enhances Alfred State’s new Roadmap to 2020 Strategic Plan. The vision, mission, and core values of the two mutually supporting plans are congruent and are as follows:

- Vision: Alfred State will be THE premier regional college of technology creating opportunity for our students to achieve successful careers and purposeful lives.
- Mission: Alfred State delivers outstanding associate and baccalaureate degree programs through hands-on learning, preparing in-demand and involved students in a caring community.
- Core Values: Respect, Integrity, Service, and Dedication

The Civic Action Plan also aligns with the commitments of the Campus Compact 30th Anniversary Action Statement summarized below:

- Prepare our students for lives of engaged citizenship, with the motivation and capacity to deliberate, act, and lead in pursuit of the public good.
- Empower our students, faculty, staff, and community partners to co-create mutually respectful partnerships in pursuit of a just, equitable, and sustainable future for communities beyond the campus – nearby and around the world.
- Embrace our responsibilities as place-based institutions, contributing to the health and strength of our communities – economically, socially, environmentally, educationally, and politically.
- Harness the capacity of our institutions – through research, teaching, partnerships, and institutional practice – to challenge social and economic inequalities.
- Foster an environment that affirms the centrality of the public purposes of higher education by setting high expectations for the campus community to contribute to their achievement.
Context & Process

Alfred State is a member of Campus Compact - a coalition of nearly 1,100 colleges and universities committed to the public purpose of higher education. Membership has been invaluable for professional development, grant funding, consultation, and our AmeriCorps VISTA initiative.

Campus Compact celebrated its anniversary with the Campus Compact 30th Anniversary Action Statement - a statement encouraging member higher education institutions to leverage civic engagement infrastructure in the service of public outcomes. A key deliverable is developing a Civic Action Plan - actions our campus will take as we continue to deepen our community impact.

President Sullivan appointed the Civic Action Plan Committee to develop a plan that highlights our ongoing civic engagement efforts and establishes college wide aspirational goals. Committee membership - consisting of faculty, staff, and students - enabled broad input from key stakeholders and facilitated a process cognizant of the big picture of the institution and community. Committee members included:

- Kaitlyn Brown, Associate Director of Annual Giving and Alumni Relations
- Jonathan Hilsher, Chair & Director of Civic Engagement
- Robert Mahany, Student, Construction Management Engineering Technology
- Kathy Markel, Senior Associate Director of Admissions
- Peter McClain, Director of Sponsored Programs and Control Services
- Ana McClanahan, Dean, School of Applied Technology
- Amy Miller, Residence Director
- Doug Pierson, Faculty, Department of Agriculture & Veterinary Technology
- Jason Stupp, Faculty, Department of English & Humanities
- Leah Villagomez, Student, Accounting

The Civic Action Plan committee followed the integrated planning approach promoted through the Society for College and University Planning (SCUP). SCUP defines integrated planning as a “sustainable approach to planning that builds relationships, aligns the organization, and emphasizes preparedness for change.” The Strategic Plan Committee recently utilized this approach to maximize input and successfully develop the Roadmap to 2020 Strategic Plan.

The Civic Action Plan committee developed a roadmap, assessed the landscape, and ultimately created a plan based on substantive and broad input from stakeholders. Below represents an overall timeline of efforts in developing this document.

Value Proposition

This plan will add value to our educational mission and enhance our institutional commitment to applied learning, sustainability, and civic engagement in the following ways:

Student Learning & Retention: Well-designed civic engagement activities contribute to student success. Key findings summarized in this Association of American Colleges & Universities (AAC&U) report include the following:

- Civically engaged students learn more academic content and higher-order skills. There is a consistent relationship between civic engagement and academic engagement.
- Active, community engaged students stay in school, earn their degrees, more frequently pursue higher levels of postsecondary education, and often become future volunteers.

High Impact Practice: AAC&U researcher Dr. George Kuh has identified community based learning as a high impact practice – a widely tested teaching and learning practice shown to be beneficial for college students from many backgrounds.

Alignment with Strategic Plan: Alfred State completed a year long process to develop a new plan to guide the institution over the next three years. The Civic Action Plan complements this effort and leverages key elements of the plan associated with our public purpose. For example, CAP builds upon our vision of how we help our students achieve purposeful lives, how we articulate our core value of service, and how we integrate a community based perspective in the strategic priorities.

Maximize Our Community Impact: A clear and achievable plan will enable greater coordination and support of existing efforts as well as generate new ideas. It will articulate the value we offer to our region as well as the reciprocal and mutual benefits obtained through intentional collaboration.

Applied Learning: Community engagement facilitates learning as students engage in direct application of skills, theories, and models. Experiential learning that benefits the larger community already represents a sizeable component of applied learning efforts. This plan directly supports Alfred State’s commitment and leadership within the context of this State University of New York system initiative.

Differentiation: A clearly defined civic action plan will highlight Alfred State’s unique and effective approach to applied learning, illustrate the community impact of campus activities, and demonstrate how this translates into graduates who are effective and engaged citizens.

Institutional Baseline
The Alfred State seal states the following - “Enter to Learn, Go Forth to Serve”- language that accurately reflects over a century of community engagement, outreach, and service. A singular focus on project-based, applied learning has proven to engage students in a deeper knowledge of the subject matter. Real world problem solving is a core theme across the curriculum and fosters an environment conducive to community engagement. Civic engagement represents a type of applied learning that emphasizes problem solving and encourages collaboration to address challenges and opportunities.

Student Power:
Alfred State students contribute 85,000 hours of community service through curricular and co-curricular project-based activities each year. When self-reported faculty/staff hours are included, approximately 100,000 hours of civic investment provides a substantial infusion of skills, effort, and expertise into the community. Over the past five years, there has been an increase of:
- 88 percent in total number of student community service hours
- 20 percent in number of students involved in curricular civic engagement

Service through Applied Learning:
The majority of community engagement hours take place through academic classes and programs. Students engage with their coursework in ways that benefit the larger community. For example, Architecture students develop village plans to enhance local communities, Building Trades students support Habitat for Humanity affiliates, and the Veterinary Technology students engage with community partners from Wellsville, NY, to Haiti. Over the past five years, there has been an increase of:
- 245 percent in faculty who self-report curricular community engagement through projects, class assignments, or other applied learning activities
- 105 percent in reported community service hours by faculty/staff within and beyond the campus community

Center for Civic Engagement:
The Center for Civic Engagement (CCE) provides dedicated infrastructure and leadership to civic initiatives incorporating an active team of student leaders, an AmeriCorps VISTA member, a part-time Residence Director Coordinator, and a Director. The Center supports initiatives and activities that maximize student learning, align with student interests, and make a positive impact in the larger community - often through strong partnerships.

Student Leadership Center:
The Student Leadership Center acts as a major focus for co-curricular leadership and civic engagement programing. A signature program is the Leadership Suite initiative - a nationally recognized program that supports and enhances the most civically active student organizations and provides pathways for engagement to less involved students.
Community Baseline

Alfred State is located in Allegany County - a rural county in the Southern Tier of NY with a rich history, beautiful scenery, and many recreational opportunities. It is also one of the poorer counties in the state. According to the US Census Bureau, the median income for a household is $42,776, and 16.8 percent of the population lives below the poverty line.

Alfred State’s geographic location affords a unique opportunity to create positive impacts in Allegany County, neighboring Steuben County, and throughout the region. The college provides an infusion of financial capital, social capital, and expertise that makes a positive difference in local communities. It also delivers an affordable and high quality post-secondary education that contributes high quality, skilled graduates vital to the region’s economic and social vitality.

Similar to the many industry advisory boards connected to academic departments, a CCE Community Advisory Board provides important input and feedback into the community engagement efforts of the college. This body has been an important avenue for gaining valuable advice related to capitalizing on community assets, addressing challenges, and leveraging resources to create progress within the region.

The Civic Action Plan seeks to align with Allegany County’s comprehensive plan, to incorporate needs assessments from key institutions, and to advance regional efforts in economic development, sustainability, and community engagement.

Leveraging Resources

Alfred State generates community impact and positive educational outcomes through collaboration with external partners. This approach maximizes existing relationships developed through specific disciplines and programs. A broad and diverse number of quality partnerships will continue to be a key strategy to accomplishing action items. A small sampling of strategic partnerships include:

- Alfred Community Garden Initiative - Alfred State provides land and resources to enable local production of healthy and affordable foods contributing to food security and nutrition.
- Allegany County SPCA - Students and faculty provide medical care to shelter animals, including spaying and neutering, which ultimately makes the animals more adoptable.
- Celebrate Service Celebrate Allegany - This day of service mobilizes hundreds of students to connect with neighbors, build relationships, and engage in high impact service projects.
- Collaborative High School Program - The Center for Community Education and Training partners with school districts to help students achieve college credit reducing future debt load.
- Economic Development - Alfred State partners with county government to provide leadership to economic development efforts focused on retaining and attracting industry and creating jobs.
- Engineering Week Competition - Alfred State hosts area secondary schools to participate in a design competition increasing understanding/interest in engineering & technology careers.
- Semester in the South - Building Trades students apply their skills to support the work of Habitat for Humanity and to renovate an urban community center along the gulf coast.
- Southern Tier Architectural Center - Architecture and design students work with area communities to meet local needs and propose solutions to villages, towns, and municipalities.
- Special Olympics Track and Field Event - Athletics Department partners with NY Special Olympics and area schools to provide a premier competition experience to students with intellectual disabilities.

In addition, the full plan and progress toward implementation and achievement of goals will be posted on the college website to maximize transparency.

Finally, Alfred State will leverage its leadership in local, regional, and national organizations to share successes, best practices, and lessons learned. This includes forums, publications, and presentation opportunities through Campus Compact, NASPA, State University of New York, and other regional and professional organizations.
